

What are we already building?

1. Imagine Your Life Together

After your five conversations, take a little time together to look back at what you discovered. You don't need to capture everything. Choose the things that feel important to the two of you.

What is already good between us?

What do you value about your relationship as it is now?

What do we already have that we want to carry into our marriage?

.....

.....

.....

.....

What do we want our marriage to feel like?

Think back to the ordinary day you imagined five years from now.

When we picture being married to each other, what do we hope will characterise our life together?

.....

.....

.....

.....

2. Following Jesus together

How do we want to follow Jesus together?

What did you discover about the place you hope Scripture, prayer, church, serving and faith will have in your marriage? How do we hope following Jesus will shape the way we love each other?

.....

.....

.....

.....

3. Staying interested in each other

What are we discovering about each other?

What surprised you during these conversations? What would you like to understand more about your partner? What do I want to stay curious about?

.....

.....

.....

.....

4. When things get hard

When things get difficult, what helps us?

Think about the difficult moments you have already handled well.

What helps us understand each other, reconnect and find our way back to each other?

.....

.....

.....

.....

5. Make room for what matters

What do we want to make room for?

You don't need ten new habits. Choose one or two things you want to protect or practise as you move towards marriage. What matters enough to us that we want to make room for it?

.....

.....

.....

.....

And one last question...

Put this Roadmap somewhere safe. Come back to it after you're married – perhaps on an anniversary – and ask each other:

What has become true?

.....

.....

.....

What has surprised us?

.....

.....

.....

What are we grateful for?

.....

.....

.....

And then:

What are we building together now?

.....

.....

.....